Bibliographical Catalogue
Arrangement of Bibliographical Catalogue

Works in the catalogue are listed alphabetically by author, or by title when no author has been identified or the work is anonymous. Titles and publication information for books are taken from the National Union Catalogue of Pre-1956 Imprints (and on a few occasions from the British Museum Catalogue of Printed Books and the catalogue of the Bibliotheque Nationale), and minor variations in the forms of reporting these data have not been normalized. Whenever verifiable, the edition cited is the one Thoreau used; otherwise, publication data for the most recent and readily accessible edition are listed.

On the line following the publication data, Thoreau’s probable source for the item, if known, is identified by one of a series of abbreviations expanded below. For books whose source is the catalogue of Thoreau’s personal library, I have noted those items that carry the autograph of another member of his family and that may therefore not have been of particular use or interest to him. If his source for a given work is unknown, this line is blank.

Following the source line is a listing of Thoreau’s references to the work in both his published writings and unpublished manuscript notebooks, again identified by abbreviations that are expanded below. References in his published works come first, in the approximate order of their composition, followed by references in the Journal, and then by references in the manuscript notebooks. With the exception of his late essay “Huckleberries” and his correspondence, citations to his published writings are either to the definitive Princeton University Press edition of his writings currently in progress, or—for volumes not yet superseded by those in the Princeton series—to the previously standard Walden edition (Houghton Mifflin, 1906). References to the Journal are listed by date and by volume and page number, so that passages may be located in either edition. References to the previously unpublished portions of the forthcoming third volume of the Journal in the Princeton edition are identified by “PJ 3” and date.

Exact dates for many entries are provided by dated library charging records, Journal entries, or correspondence. In cases where no such precise date is established for an entry in a manuscript notebook, a conjectural date is supplied, based on the item’s position with respect to other, dateable entries. A brief comment on the item—its use to Thoreau, its relation to other items in the catalogue, or a special problem connected with it—may follow the list of references. Occasionally these notes refer by author and short title to previous studies of various aspects of Thoreau’s reading, expanded citations of which may be found in the bibliography of secondary sources that follows the catalogue.
