Poor and wanting bread,
Steeped in poverty,
Than to be a dread,
Than to be afraid,
For it is not living
To a soul believing,
To change each noble joy
Which our strength employs,
For a state half rotten
And a life of toys.

Better be forgotten
Than lose equinoiice.

How shall I live? In earnestness.
What shall I do? Work earnestly.
What shall I give? A willingness.
What shall I gain? Tranquillity.
In which I act and no man bless!
Flash out in action infinite and free,
Action conjoined with deep tranquillity,
Resting upon the soul's true utterance,
And life shall flow as merry as a dance.

Life is too good to waste, enough to prize;
Keep looking round with clear unhooded eyes;
Love all thy brothers, and for them endure
Many privations; the reward is sure.

A little thing! There is no little thing;
Through all a joyful song is murmuring;
Each leaf, each stem, each sound in winter & rear
Has deepest meanings for an anxious ear.

A howling fox, a shrieking owl,
A violent distracting Ghoul,
Forms of the most infuriate madness,—
These may not move thy heart to gladness,
But look within the dark outside,
Nought shalt thou hate and nought deride.

He seems, not does, and in that shows
No true nobility,—
A poor ductility,
That no proper office knew,
Not even estimation small of human woes.

Be not afraid,
His understanding old
With thy own pure content,
On highest purpose bent.

Leave him not lonely,
For that his admiration
Fastens on self and seeming only;
Make a right dedication
Of all thy strength to keep
From swelling that so ample heap
Of lives abused, of virtue given nought.
And thus it shall appear for all in nature hast thou wrought.

A little thing!
There is no little thing;
Through all a joyful song is murmuring;
Each leaf, each stem, each sound in winter & rear
Has deepest meanings for an anxious ear.

A life well spent is like a flower,
That had bright sunshine its brief hour;
It flourished in pure willingness;
Discovered strongest earnestness;
Was fragrant for each lightest wind;
Wax of its own particular kind;—
Nor knew a tone of discord sharp;
Breathed alway like a silver harp;
And went to immortality
A very proper thing to die.

We will close our extracts from this rare file of blotted paper with a lighter strain, which, whilst it shows how guily a poet can chide, gives us a new insight into his character and habits.

TORMENTS.

Yes! they torment me
Most exceedingly:—
I would I could flee.

A breeze on a river—
I listen forever;
The yellowish heather
Under cool weather,—
These are pleasures to me.
What do torment me? Those living vacantly, Who live but to see; Indefinite action, Nothing but motion, Round stones a rolling, No inward controlling;— Yes! they torment me.

Some cry all the time, Even in their prime Of youth’s flushing clime. Oh! out on this sorrow!

Fear’s thou to-morrow? Set thy legs going, Be stamping, be rowing,— This of life is the lime.

Hail, thou mother Earth! Who gave me thy worth For my portion at birth I walk in thy azure, Unfondoferasure, But they who torment me So most exceedingly Sit with feet on the hearth.

We have more pages from the same hand lying before us, marked by the same purity and tenderness and early wisdom as these we have quoted, but we shall close our extracts here. May the right hand that has so written never lose its cunning! may this voice of love and harmony teach its songs to the too long silent echoes of the Western Forest.

ART AND ARTIST.

With dauntless eye the lofty one Moves on through life; Majestic as the mighty sun He knows no strife.

He sees the thought flow to the form, And rise like bubble bright; A moment of beauty,— and it is gone, Dissolved in light.

ERNST THE SEEKER.

CHAPTER II.

"Then let the good be free to breathe a note Of elevation—let their odors float Around these Converts, and their glories blend, Outshining sightly tapers, or the bluez Of the noon-day. Nor doubt that golden cords Of good works, mingling with the visions, raise The soul to purer worlds."—Wordsworth.

As Ernest entered the boudoir, Edith hastily closed her portfolio, and wiping away a tear, rose gracefully to greet him.

"Ah! Ernest! Is it you? How glad I am it is no stranger. I would not have an indifferent eye seeme thus moved. My Saint has gone to join the blessed. Sister Luise died last night;" and after a moment gazing at him she added, "You shall see this sketch in which I have hinted to myself the lesson of her life."

Ernest took her hand, and seating himself at the table, they looked together at the three pencilled outlines. The first represented a cavern’s mouth, on the edge of a garden, where in the distance dancing groupes were visible. Entering the vault, his face veiled, one arm wrapped in his heavy robe, extending behind him, an aged man seemed slowly drawing on a beautiful girl,—whose feet followed willingly;—while the averted head, the straining eye, the parted lips told, that the heart was with one of the rejoicers behind, who stood watching her. The second sketch was of a chamber in the rock, lighted only from a cleft,—and on the floor, as in a swoon, the female form alone,—her face hidden in her mantle, with one hand cast forward, grasping the crucifix. In the third was again a garden, and a cavern’s mouth, but now reversed; and near and far, under shading branches, placid figures seemed conversing. In the fore-ground his back to the beholder, stood with light, triumphant air a youth, from whose presence glory seemed to beam, while lowly in gesture, but with upraised and assured face, glided forth from the dark prison the Virgin.

"And so she has cast off her earthly dross," said Ern-
