Collection Description

Biographical Note

Born Nov. 12, 1920 in Rochester, NY, Eleanor Kask grew up in Long Island, NY. Shortly after graduating cum laude from Hofstra University in 1942, where she played women's basketball for at least 1 season (1941-1942), Kask began working in the publicity department at World Publishing. Her 1942 commencement was not the last contact Friede had with her Alma Mater. She was later given the Hofstra University Young Alumnus/ Alumna Award and served on the university's Publishing Studies and Literature program Advisory Board, which began in 1976. She married Donald Friede (1901-1965) in 1951, a senior editor at World Publishing.

An amateur pilot and member of the International Women Pilots Association, known as The 99s, Eleanor Friede also published aviation books. This connection to flying led to her editing Richard Bach's Jonathan Livingston Seagull (1970), during her time as an editor at Macmillan. Friede is quoted as saying she was "very find of the little creature" and "I have done and am doing other things. It's really O.K. to be the seagull lady."

She is noted to have worked for publishing giants McGraw-Hill, Funk & Wagnalls, World Publishing, Macmillan, Delacorte, and Doubleday Books. Friede held positions ranging from assistant to the president, head of promotion, advertising and publishing, reader and book reviewer, marketing director, and editor before becoming a literary agent. In 1974, while working at Delacorte, Friede was given her own imprint, noted as Delacorte/Eleanor Friede. It seems her career path naturally led to the founding of her literary agency, Eleanor Friede Books, Inc., after Delacorte was purchased by Doubleday Books in the 1980s.

Friede was the literary agent responsible for Helen Nearing's Simple Food for the Good Life: An Alternative Cookbook (1980; Delacorte Press/ Eleanor Friede). Friede also aided Ellen LaConte in publishing a biography on Helen Nearing, On Light Alone: A Guru Meditation on the Good Death of Helen Nearing (1996; Loose Leaf Press). Friede's collection gives a sense of the comradery and trust between these notable women.

Eleanor Friede died July 14, 2008, in Charlottesville, VA, and is survived by two stepdaughters.

Scope and Content
Eleanor Friede Papers includes correspondence with Helen Nearing, Ellen LaConte, and publishing companies.

Original order of materials has been maintained. Oversized folders are marked with an asterisk (*); these folders have been housed separately from the rest of the collection.
